PREFACE

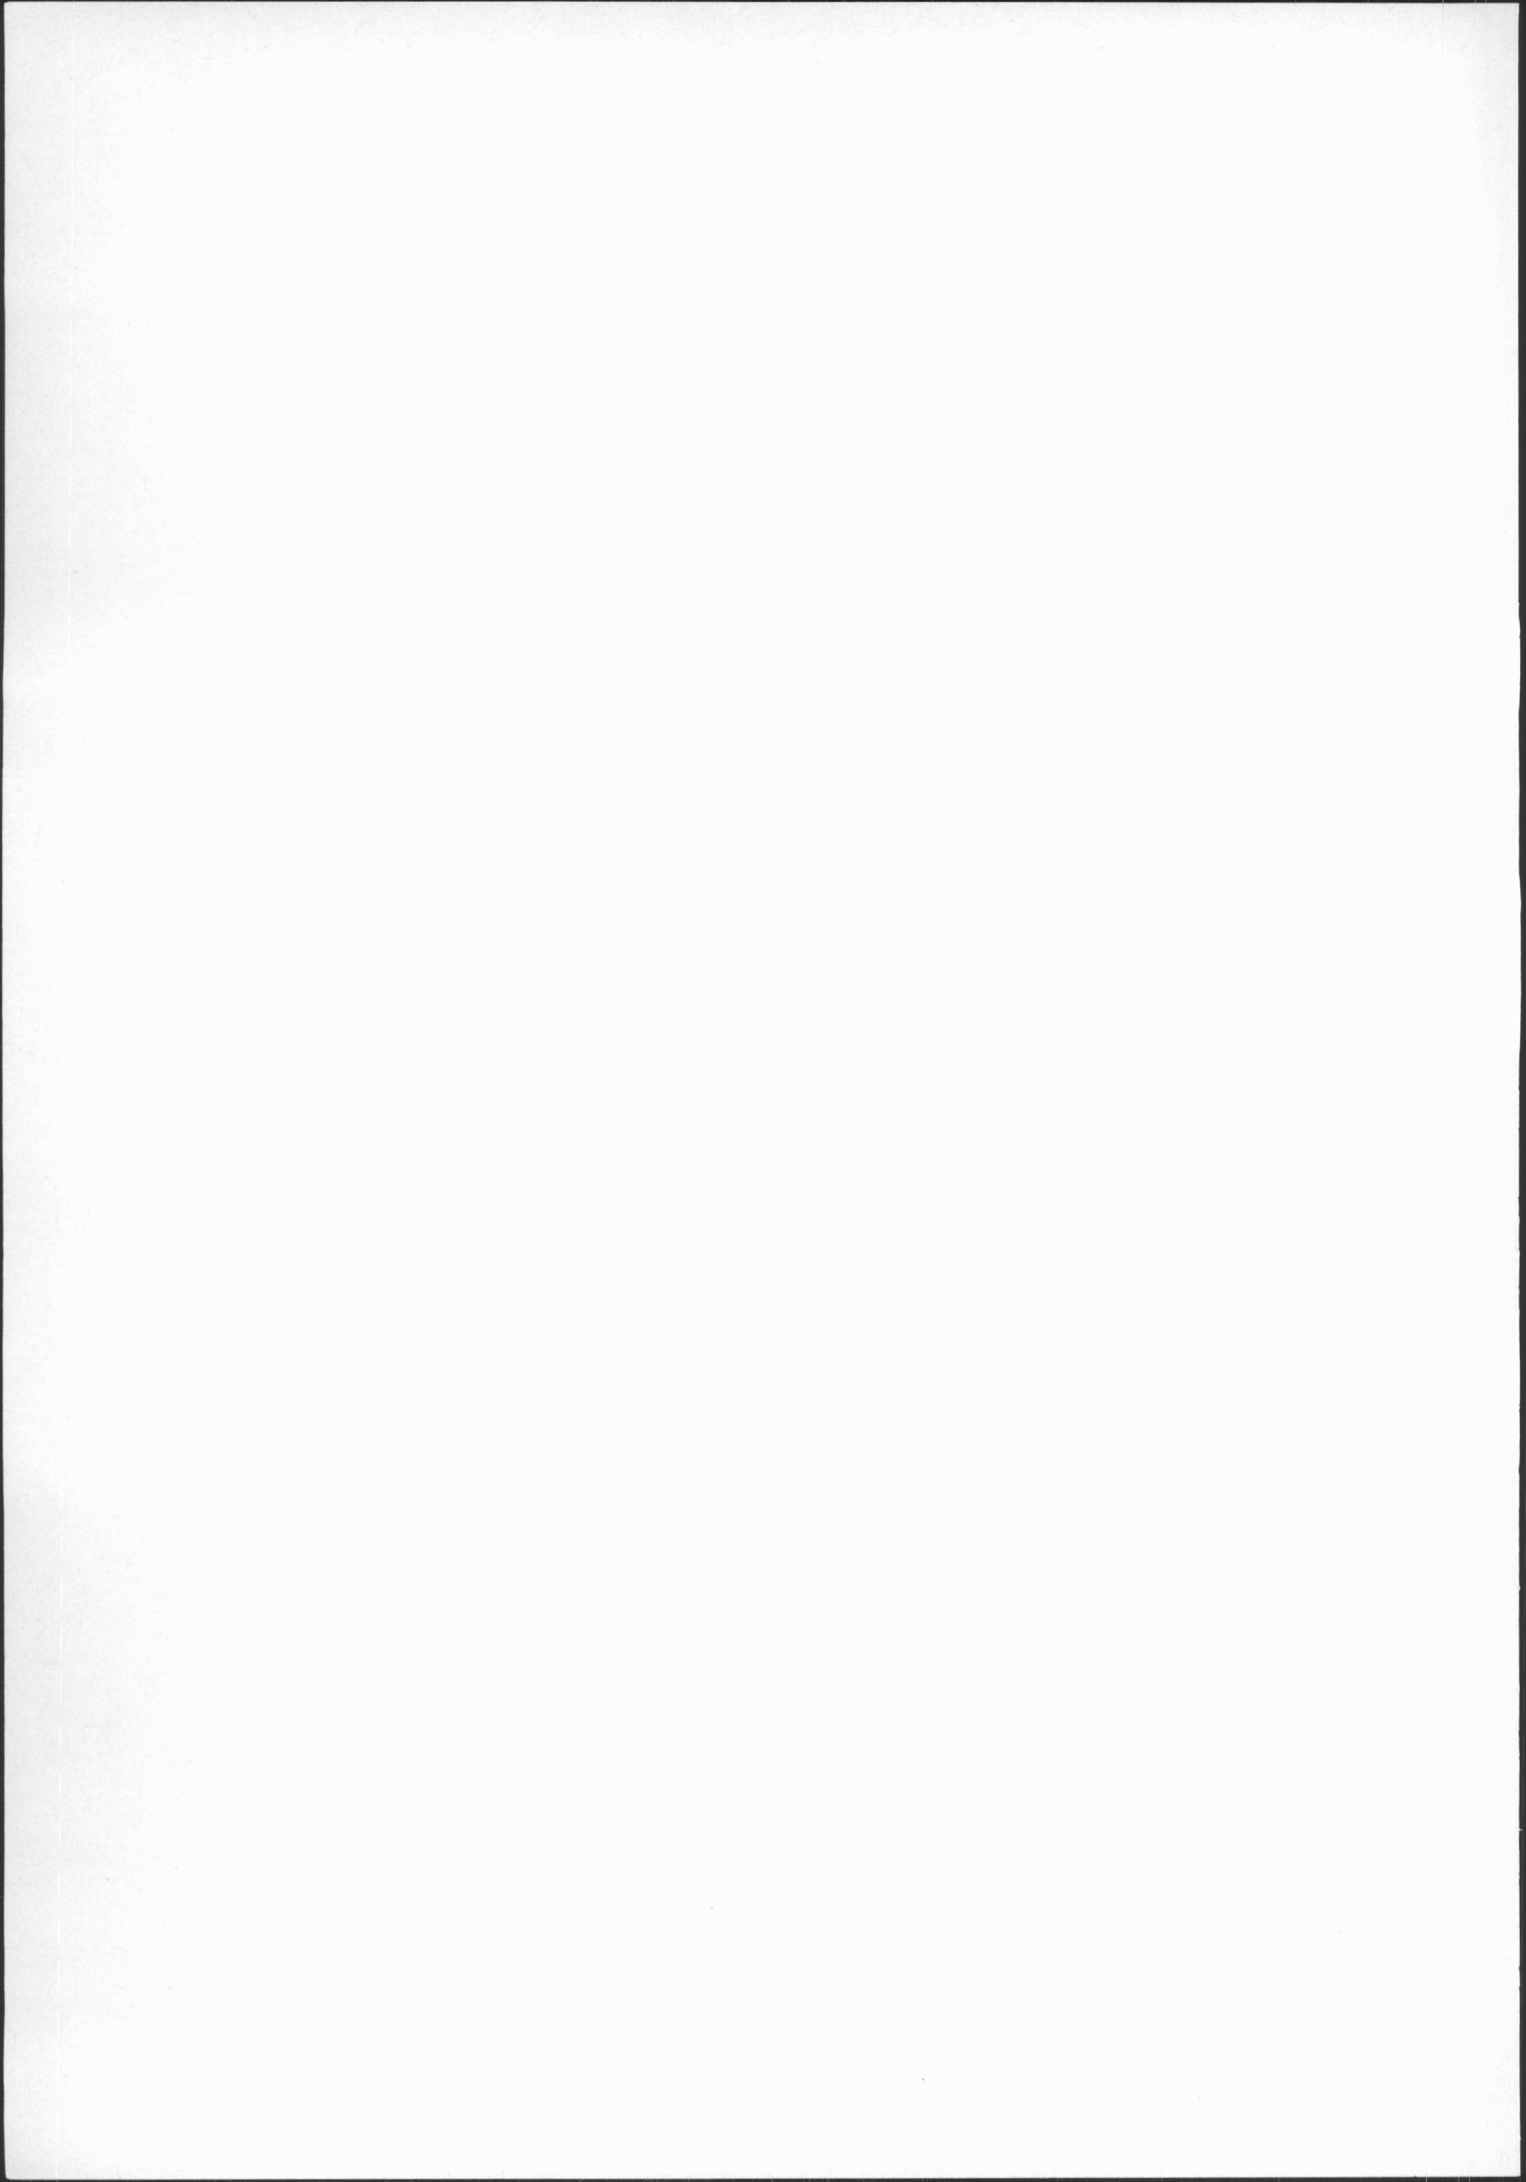

The 1966 Census publication programme is made up of five individual Volumes, four consisting of a number of separate Parts, together with a series of supplementary statements in mimeographed form. The actual titles of the 1966 Census Volumes and Parts are listed in the back of this publication; the content of each is briefly as follows:

- Volume 1. Single characteristics of the population for Australia, Parts 1-11.—Age, marital status, birthplace, nationality, period of residence, education, religion, occupational status, industry, occupation and race.
- Volume 2. Related characteristics of population for Australia, Parts 1-5.—Growth and distribution of the population, demographic data, overseas-born population, the work force, and families and households.
- Volume 3. Housing.
- Volume 4. Single characteristics of the population and dwellings in Local Government Areas, Parts 1-7.—New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, Tasmania, and Northern Territory and Australian Capital Territory.
- Volume 5. Population and dwellings in localities, Parts 1-7.—States and Territories as for Volume 4, and Part 8.—Australia.

This publication is Part 11 of Volume 1 and contains details of the race of the population enumerated at 30 June 1966 together with comparative data for previous Censuses.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Race

The use of self-enumeration methods in Australian censuses has repeatedly produced problems when attempting to obtain details of an individual's race or racial origin. This stems largely from the inability of most people to readily identify themselves with a particular race defined in ethnic terms. In Australia, this is further complicated by the presence in the population of a large migrant group of diverse ethnic origins. The practice, therefore, has been to seek details of a person's race based on a geographical rather than an ethnological definition. The term "European" is used to cover those ethnic or racial groups (e.g. Caucasian, Slavonic, Celtic, Latin) which have their origins in the countries of Europe while terms such as "Afghan", "Filipino", etc. cover those ethnic groups normally to be found in the countries of Afghanistan and the Philippines, etc.

Form of enquiry

Information relating to the racial composition of the population was collected for the first time at the Census of 1911. At censuses prior to 1966 the instructions relating to race were insufficient to enable respondents to classify themselves according to the degree of racial mixture. For example, from 1933 to 1961 persons were asked the following question :

"For persons of European race, wherever born, write "European". For non-Europeans state the race to which they belong, for example, "Aboriginal", "Chinese", "Negro", "Afghan", etc. If the person is half-caste with one parent of European race, write also "H.C.", for example "H.C. Aboriginal", "H. C. Chinese", etc."

At the 1966 Census the instructions were re-designed as follows in an endeavour to obtain precise data on racial mixture and also to avoid the opprobrium attaching to the term "half-caste":

"State each person's race. For persons of European race, wherever born, write "European". Otherwise state whether Aboriginal, Chinese, Indian, Japanese, etc., as the case may be. If of more than one race give particulars, for example, $\frac{1}{2}$ European- $\frac{1}{2}$ Aboriginal, $\frac{3}{4}$ Aboriginal- $\frac{1}{4}$ Chinese, $\frac{1}{2}$ European- $\frac{1}{2}$ Chinese".

The tables in this Part show race classified under "European" (relating to persons of more than half "European" blood) and "non-European" (relating to persons of more than half of the race specified, or half of the race specified and half European). Persons belonging to three or more races where no race represents more than half, or persons of two non-European races each representing half, have been described as "mixed blood".

Australian Aborigines

The coverage of Aborigines has improved progressively from census to census as the number of Aborigines in contact with population centres has increased and as improved methods of overcoming the collection problems have been developed.

At the 1966 Census extensive arrangements were made to obtain as full a coverage of Aborigines as possible and to enumerate fully those Aborigines "out of contact". Throughout Australia the assistance of Aboriginal welfare bodies, mission superintendents, station owners, patrol officers and police was sought. In particular, in the Northern Territory, information was obtained from missions and settlements concerning Aborigines normally residing at such locations but absent at the time of the Census, and of Aborigines residing at such locations but who normally resided elsewhere. The two sets of information were reconciled and, together with the normal enumeration in other areas, resulted in a fairly complete and accurate coverage of Aborigines in the Northern Territory.

Prior to the 1966 Census, Aborigines "out of contact" were not enumerated and estimates of these were made by authorities responsible for Aboriginal welfare. It is estimated that at the 1954 Census 12,956 Aborigines (Northern Territory—5,369, Western Australia—3,516, Queensland—2,311 and South Australia—1,760) were not contacted by census collectors and were not included in the census. Increasing numbers came into contact after 1954 and at the 1961 Census it is estimated that only 2,000 Aborigines in Western Australia and 1,944 in the Northern Territory were not contacted.

The reporting by Aborigines in the 1966 Census was insufficiently precise to differentiate persons who were exactly half Aboriginal from those who were more than half Aboriginal. Additionally, the totals shown in the tables for persons who were half or more than half Aboriginal may be suspect, primarily because of the inclusion of persons who described themselves simply as "Aboriginal" even though they were less than half Aboriginal, and also because of the inclusion under "European" of persons who were half Aboriginal and half European but who stated their race as "European".

As a result of such reporting difficulties all tables in this part show details of the totals for each race (including Aboriginal) with no dissection into full-blood and half-blood. Persons reported as full-blood Aborigines at the 1966 Census have been excluded from general Census tables, and the total population shown in the tables in this Part exceeds the total population given in other Census publications. Because of the response difficulties mentioned above the difference between these totals cannot be interpreted as giving a reliable estimate of the numbers of full-blood Aborigines.

Population distribution

The understanding and measurement of the process of urbanisation have long been recognised as fundamentally important to considerations of economic and social change. For this reason census information has traditionally been published separately for 'metropolitan', 'other urban', and 'rural' areas. However, the criteria used in the past for making this dissection (criteria which are still used in many countries) did not provide comparable data for different areas or for different points of time.

In Australian censuses up to and including the Census of 1947 complete local government areas were classified as either urban or rural, and 'urban' areas therefore usually consisted of whole local government areas, or multiples of them. However, many local government areas, particularly at the fringe of large urban complexes, contain both urban and rural components. In some cases it was necessary to split local government areas for statistical purposes in order to eliminate large rural expanses from the metropolitan areas. Boundaries of local government areas were also subject to variation for reasons unrelated to (and often conflicting with) statistical requirements, and consequently this method became increasingly unsatisfactory.

In the Censuses of 1954 and 1961 all localities of 1,000 population and over (750 and over in Tasmania) were classified as 'urban'. Boundaries were delineated either from local advice, inspection in the field, or from aerial photographs. However, although these procedures were an improvement on the earlier ones, the boundary decisions made for different urban centres, being highly subjective, did not always provide sufficient comparability from census to census nor between one centre and another.

Delimitation of urban centres

The principles and criteria used for the delimitation of urban centres in Australia at the 1966 Census were as follows :

A boundary was defined for all settlements with a population of 1,000 or more and these were named 'urban centres' except for the State capitals and Canberra which were named 'Metropolitan areas'. This boundary is one which, from census to census, as urbanisation proceeds, will be moved outwards to encompass any peripheral urban development.

For urban centres with a population of 30,000 and over, and for a few smaller centres, the following criteria were adopted for delimiting the urban centres.

- (a) The Metropolitan Area or urban centre was delimited by including all contiguous census collector's districts with a population density of 500 or more persons per square mile.
- (b) Certain collector's districts, although not reaching the required population density, were also included by virtue of—
 - (i) land use (e.g. factory areas),
 - (ii) being surrounded by urban collector's districts,
 - (iii) forming a 'bridge' between two urban centres less than two miles apart so that they could be regarded as one single urban centre.

For urban centres of less than 30,000 population, local government area boundaries were adopted, unless they contained a large rural component or urban development was known to extend beyond the local government boundary. In these cases they were delimited by inspection of aerial photographs, by field inspection, or by consideration of any other information available, and the boundaries were set as closely as possible to the periphery of the built-up area without regard to local government boundaries. In areas with large numbers of holiday homes, many of which are unoccupied at the mid-winter census date, dwelling rather than population criteria were used. These criteria were 250 dwellings (in lieu of the 1,000 population mentioned above) and 125 dwellings per square mile (in lieu of the 500 persons per square mile mentioned above).

Around each metropolitan area and urban centre with a population of at least 75,000 and a regional population of at least 100,000, a further boundary was defined, designed to circumscribe an area which would contain the urban development of that centre for at least twenty years and which would generally be socially and economically oriented to the centre. These areas were designated 'Statistical Divisions' (for State capital cities) or 'Statistical Districts' (for Canberra, Newcastle, Wollongong and Geelong).

Because the new criteria for the delimitation of urban boundaries were adopted only shortly prior to the 1966 Census a few collector's districts containing urban growth were not split into their rural and (potentially) urban components, with the result that significant urban population remained included in large, predominantly rural, collector's districts, which did not meet the density criterion. Such cases occurred mainly around the Sydney Metropolitan Area and Urban Toowoomba. The effect on the Sydney Metropolitan Area is small, probably not more than 5,000 urban population having been omitted. In Toowoomba the effect is proportionately much greater, the urban population probably being understated by up to 3,000 persons.

Migratory population

The migratory population consists of persons who, at midnight between 30 June 1966 and 1 July 1966, were enumerated on board ships in Australian ports, or ships which had left an Australian port prior to census night with a next port of call in Australia. It also includes persons, who at census time, were enumerated on long-distance trains, motor coaches or aircraft.

General

The criteria adopted at the 1966 Census allow more reliable comparison of the population of different areas at the one point in time. However, comparison with section of State data of previous censuses is limited because of the different bases upon which these areas were defined at the earlier censuses. Although detailed comparison at the individual characteristic level is not possible, the population enumerated at the 1961 Census has been allocated retrospectively to each section of State on the basis of the criteria adopted for the 1966 Census, and the following table gives some indication of the differences caused by the application of the new criteria in each State. Unfortunately, it is not practicable to extend this table to show similar comparisons for censuses prior to 1961 nor to include details of the effect of the new criteria upon population allocation to section of State according to individual characteristics.

(a) Includes persons who reported themselves as being more than 50 per cent Aboriginal or simply as Aboriginal. The difference between the total population as published and those shown in other Census publications, which exclude full-blood Aborigines, cannot be taken as reliable statistics of the full-blood Aboriginal population due to reporting difficulties described in the bulletin The Aboriginal Population of Australia, Summary of Characteristics (Ref. No. 2.23), issued on 16 April 1969. (b) Persons of over 50 per cent European race. (c) Persons of more than 50 per cent of the race specified, or of 50 per cent of the race specified and 50 per cent European. (d) Persons of three or more races where no race represents more than 50 per cent, or persons of two non-European races each of which represents 50 per cent. (e) Includes population classed as migratory.
